

2023 FBAR ORGANIZER – FINCEN 114

The FBAR is an extremely important annual disclosure required of all U.S. citizens and resident aliens, and it is due April 15th. While there may be little or no eventual U.S. federal and state tax that you may incur by reporting activity on a foreign account (e.g., interest on a foreign bank account), the penalties for failure to disclose the very identity of foreign accounts on the separate FBAR filing (including securities and accounts for which you have merely signature authority) can be severe.

To save time and professional fees, it is of the utmost importance that you recognize that we simply need to disclose the highest value in each account, even if it is only for one day. Please do not send us foreign documents, in foreign language, expecting us to interpret the account statements.

If you have multiple foreign accounts, either by yourself or jointly, please attach details on a separate sheet with the same information as requested by Parts II and III.

If you have income and/or transactions from these foreign accounts, please provide details of the income, gains, losses and expenses separately with your Tax Organizer.
